“ Art (Cinnamon Man as he was known by some) was a regular at Tim Horton's most mornings and joined a group of us for chatter about sports (he would have enjoyed this year's Australian Open), politics and unimportant things. We have missed him these past months when he was no longer able to come. I was happy that I did talk with him a week or 2 before his death. At that point he was hoping to get back to driving and promised he would drive out to our area once he did start. I am so happy to have had Art in my life for a few short years. A very interesting person. We miss him and I along with his Timmy friends send our condolences to his family. He was so proud of you.
