“ *I swear I walked passed you on the sidewalk the other day, I literally had to look 3 different times. I wanted to yell your name but then thought it couldn't be true.
I know we didn't talk much before your passing but I miss you, you were such an amazing friend with an amazing smile and laugh too.
I still hate the fact that you're gone and too soon at that.*

“ Cassandra I remember the times we came up to see you and the family. You were just a little girl who had so much love for books. I thought to myself well here is this nerd reading on a Friday night lol..., but you were more than that nerd I thought you were....keep in mind I was a bratty and into myself teen who didn't know any better myself. Lol....But as time went on I thought to myself with all this reading shes doing she just might become the next lady president.. but you were more than that. As time went on you be came a know it all teen yourself, and yes I said it a know it all. You were stubborn, what I liked to call it up front and personal, you were a teenager on a mission. Your future was as bright as your eyes and smile. You would walk into a room and all eyes would be on you. I can still see your goofy looking face lol. You were beautiful as a teen, then you turned into a hard working woman. A woman who wanted to conqor. First school then a career which I can say you have the heart for. I always knew you would work with people. Helping others was always in your nature. You were a woman with passion. See your stubbornness turned into passion lol....

I knew right from day one that Cassandra was going to be someone special, someone who didn't care of what others thought. Someone who knew what she wanted out of life. Your life to me isn't over it's a new beginning, where you are now free to be you.... So Cassandra as I write it on here go and do what you have always done best. Go and be you....

With my deepest love

LOVE always Amanda xoxo

P.S. your goofy face and ears will always be with us

“ Dearest Cassandra, my heart is broken. There is so much I wish I had said to you (wish I could have done for you). I miss your beautiful eyes, your one of a kind smile and your goofy ears! Most of all I long for the simpler times that we spent together. From the first time I met you, you stole my heart...
