As the sky starts to brighten,
A silhouette of a man can be seen
Shimmering in first rays of day
At the end of a dock

The sound of his early morning fishing
Echoes softly in the quiet of the morning
The man smiles brightly
Enjoying the peace of his day

The sky brightens
The silhouette fades
The memory of the man

Strong in our minds

May our love and our memories always bring us the joy and happiness you found in the peaceful moments at the docks. May our thoughts of you always make us smile, brightening our loving memories of the man you were.

In Loving Memory of Charles Raymond Blain.
