Gay Ellen Ingram

Gay Ellen Ingram, born on August 23, 1951, departed from this world on September 8, 2023. Her life was marked by both joy and profound sorrow. Sadly, Gay's son, Jack LePage, died on September 4, 2022, and his loss was a heartache that was always with her. She was also predeceased by her brother, Jim, as well as her parents, Jack and Joyce (Main) Ingram. She is survived by her brother, Russell Ingram, nieces Sara McKay and Emma Ingram, and nephew, James Ingram.

Gay was a dedicated long-time employee of the Ontario provincial government; she valued her position there and contributed her talents and skills. However, her later retirement years were marred by the burden of health issues and the indescribable grief of losing her beloved son. In those challenging times, her good friend, Carol Lawrence, stood by her through the depth of her pain. Although in her later years, Gay suffered from these various struggles, we also remember the many happy moments of her life. Let us cherish the memories of a sister and sister-in-law, a mother and aunt, a daughter and friend who was once active in her community and brought joy to those around her. Gay Ingram will be missed and remembered.

“ Her beautiful, artistic, introverted soul, was such a gift to know. She was a sister to me, we were confidantes, for many years. We played together, shared authors, British Monarchy stories, camping and a love of cooking, art, music, astrology. Gay had curiosity and a grace that excepted all the imperfections of life. The poster framed from the second world war that her beloved father served in, said, "Stay Calm and Carry On." I was caregiver to Jack for two years. Then the most difficult years came and went, taking her son, and herself. I was blessed to know Gay in better times. Her very best friend Carol Lawrence saw her through to the end.
