“ I'm missing you Grammy, we all are. I knew losing of you in this physical world would hurt, but I wasn't ready. Each day was a gift and I'm grateful, but another 20 years would have been awesome.

Choosing memories of you to share really hasn't been easy. There are just too many and they all feel so important, right down to the little ones (like the pound of candies you'd tape all over our Christmas gifts each year) because that made us feel loved. You were really great at that, making us feel loved, and always grateful for our love in return. You are woven into our lives, and your playful spirit and sense of adventure lives on in us like a spark.

You loved a road worthy thermos and anyone's great story, and we'll keep telling yours, and stories about you. They're like a lively gift, full of fun, perseverance, happiness, pride, and thoughtfulness. I don't recall you dreaming about riches for yourself, except the for joy of giving it all away; family and friends were your wealth and what you valued. Our life with you held all of the wonder, excitement, joy, mishaps and reward of an unexpected road trip. My hope is that now you are free to zip around the world peeking at everything your curious heart desires.

I am a better person because of you, and now that I've embarrassed you by gushing I'll close by saying thank you, thank you for all of it, and you know what I mean. I love you.

XO Sherri

“ Thinking of all the great adventures we had. I hold them in my heart like a treasure. Our days at the lake,picking apples,finding just the right rocks to paint,camping, picnics at the beach. You weren't just my Grandmother you were my friend. You are irreplaceable. Until we meet again. 🍷🍌🍋🍓🍍
