“ its been a week now and life continues to feel so different without you. im reminded of so many moments in life ill never be able to share with you. ill miss out giving you the news of a child or having you hold them for the first time. ill miss having you at my wedding should i decide to go down that path again. But the things ill miss the most is the small things. talking sports, listening to you talk about your time in the military, the stories about your wood carvings and travelling. ill miss new years eve where at the stroke of midnight you'd open the door to let the new years air in. the small things.

But i am sure grateful for the great moments in life i was able to share with you i am glad i was able to share the last few years with you so closely. ill remember the things you taught me about love, commitment, confidence and the rest of life. its those moments ill cherish the most.

Love you
